Church Health Assessment Form

To better ensure the continued health of your particular church, and/or to renew its vitality, your Church Health and Growth Committee asks you to please take some time to self-assess your church in the following areas. Honestly evaluate your perceived current strengths and weaknesses in each area, and indicate either what action steps are being taken already to keep/make this area strong, or else determine what action steps you will take in the near future.*

Further Questions for Consideration:

1. What is the one area (or two) that needs to be given the most attention at the moment?
2. What are you most excited about in your church right now?
3. How can your Presbytery and your Church Health and Growth Committee best encourage you and your church?
4. Are there any additional reflections you would like to share at this time?

*This self-assessment should be performed by the Pastor along with other core leaders in the church, and submitted annually to the Church Health and Growth Committee. The number of leaders who provide input and the preferred setting for the assessment may vary. If you have already done a church health assessment of some other kind recently, please submit that assessment instead. As either an additional or alternative assessment, there is also available from the Committee a Church Health and Vitality Quick Assessment tool called “TruPoint,” developed by Dr. Kenneth E. Priddy and endorsed by the EPC and the Presbytery of the Southeast.

The church is well organized to achieve stated goals and purposes of the church. Unhelpful programs, committees, and other structures are pruned to ensure maximum efficiency and functionality.
